Read the passage

The School Garden

Behind the classrooms at Greenfield Primary School was a small garden that students helped to maintain. Every Monday afternoon, different groups of students watered the plants, removed weeds, and checked the vegetables.

At first, the garden contained only a few plants. Over time, the students learned how to care for tomatoes, peppers, carrots, and leafy vegetables. Their science teacher often used the garden to teach them about plants, soil, insects, and the importance of caring for the environment.

The students were proud of the garden because their work had turned an empty space into a useful learning area. They also enjoyed sharing some of the vegetables with the school kitchen.
